Until the Winter Olympics kick off in Pyongchang and skiing for Team USA, a member of American dynasty, generations of athletes who've their start not at a fancy resort but on a small hill with a big legacy. NBC's Chris Dolgrin has our Inspiring America report.

Hidden deep in Vermont's green mountains, a tiny hill you've probably never heard of. The dream of former school teacher Micky Cochran in the 1960s. Everyday Micky's kids and whoever else wanted to ski were out there. It was more about fun than being the fastest. "He also wanted us to be the best we could be at whatever it was we did" It just so happened their best was the world's best. All four of Micky's kids made the Olympics. Barbara Anne won gold. Since then, 6 of their kids have been on the US ski team including Lyon Cochran Sigel about to race in South Korea.

"What's in the water up here?" It has nothing to do with making money. Cochran says it's a nonprofit, something their parents who has since passed would be proud of. "They wanted to provide skiing, an opportunity for families to ski at an affordable price." On Friday night's lift tickets are still only $5.00, making sure future generations can dream. "You can do jump and you can go through so fast" More than a dozen skiers who aren't part of the Cochran family but learned their skills here have also made the US ski team. "We get a lot done on our little hill" A little hill with a big heart. Chris Dolgrin, NBC news, Richmond Vermont.
